Essential Information

Trek duration, how long time do we need for the Mardi Himal trek?

Mardi Himal trek normally starts from Kathmandu to end in Kathmandu with one day sightseeing in Pokhara altogether 9 Days trek. But there are several choices for the trekkers, according to the trekkers vacation time and ability, we are flexible for the Itinerary and others program.

Starting and ending point: from which place start trekking?

Mardi Himal trek depending on the client's location. Normally we are arranging whole trip. From the international airport to end at international airport. But we are flexible at all. Specially trek start from Deurali and Ending at Sidding. All the transposition are including in the package. We are able to only in the guide and porter services too.

Weather: how is the weather condition in this trek?

In the trek there are separated according as different season. The weather is not a same for every season, but normally its work. Here are we describing four different seasonal condition of the weather.

Spring season (March -May):

Spring is the one of the best trekking seasons for the Mardi Himal trek. Weather is relatively stable and clear blue skies. Wildflowers are blooming everywhere.

The temperature: During the daytime temperature is 7°C to 18°C and at the nighttime its drop down -5°C to 0°C. which is not so freezing cold.

summer Monsoon season: (June -August):

Trekking in the monsoon to Mardi Himal is not recommended. This area is most rainfall region in Nepal, and it is heavy rain. Everyday cloudy. Not good to photography because of clouds. This time must problems of the leaches in Deurali, forest camp and low camp area. Although, if you are well prepared, then this time less crowed, different experience to explore Mardi.

Temperature: During the daytime temperature is 10°C High camp to 30°C Pokhara and during the nighttime drop down 5°C in high camp to 10°C in siding.

If you are planning a trip in Summer, you need supporter and well equipment against the rainfall.

Autumn season (September - November):

Another beautiful trekking season. Mostly clear weather and panoramic views are waiting to you. This is the best time for this trek. All the great festivals are celebrating, you will have a chance to photograph for it. After monsoon, this season all the castle are grazing on the widow. The Yaks and Chauri also possible to capture on your camera. don't miss the chance to explore easily and happily in the region in the autumn.

The temperature during the day time grow 5°C (High camp) to 18°C (Pokhara) and at night time 5°C Pokhara to -3°C High camp.

If you are planning for the trek in this season, then it is a ideal choice, offering a beautiful views and suitable weather. We highly recommend this trip in autumn.

Winter season (December - February):

If you are well prepared, then a clear blue skies offering you to go this trek. Mostly clear weather but frizzing cold challenging in winter. All the paths are frozen. Most of the teahouses are closed. If you are looking in winter for this trek, you have to take guide and porter to assist you. There is no boundary if you are welled prepared to make this trek success.

The temperature is during the daytime 7°C to -2°C in High camp and at the nighttime drop down -4°C to -10°C in high camp. So, if you are considering in this temperature, not many snows and willing to chill out there are no objection to go to the trek.
