Useful Information for Pikey peak trek

Getting to Nepal what you need?

Most international travelers arrive at Tribhuvan International Airport (TIA) in Kathmandu, Nepal's capital city. Several airlines offer direct flights to Kathmandu from major cities around the world. From there, you can either take a domestic flight or drive to the starting point of the trek, depending on your chosen route.

Visa Requirements for Nepal

Travelers to Nepal need a valid passport and a tourist visa to enter the country. Tourist visas can be obtained upon arrival at TIA or from Nepalese embassies/consulates in your home country. It's recommended to check the current visa regulations and requirements before your trip.

Transportation to the Trek Starting Point

To reach the starting point of the Pickey Peak Trek, you have two options.

By Flight: You can take a domestic flight from Kathmandu to Phaplu Airport, which is the closest airport to the trek starting point. The flight takes around 35-40 minutes.

By Road access: Alternatively, you can drive from Kathmandu to Jiri, which is a scenic journey of approximately 7-8 hours. From Jiri, you can begin your trek and Drive to Dhap, the initial village on the trek route.

Local Currency and Expenses

The official currency of Nepal is the Nepalese Rupee (NPR). It's recommended to carry Nepalese currency for your expenses during the trek, as ATMs and card payment facilities may be limited in rural areas. In major cities like Kathmandu and Pokhara, you will find banks and exchange counters where you can convert your currency.

Health and Safety

Prior to your trip, it's advisable to consult with a travel doctor or visit a travel clinic to get up-to-date information about vaccinations, medications, and health precautions for Nepal. It's also essential to have travel insurance that covers trekking activities and emergency medical evacuation.

Altitude Sickness

Altitude sickness, also known as acute mountain sickness (AMS), can be a concern during high-altitude treks like Pickey Peak. It's important to understand the symptoms of AMS and acclimatize properly. Ascend gradually, stay hydrated, and listen to your body. If symptoms worsen, descend to a lower altitude and seek medical attention if necessary.

Communication and Internet

Communication facilities and internet access may be limited or intermittent during the trek. It's a good idea to inform your loved ones about the potential lack of connectivity and set expectations accordingly. Local SIM cards can be purchased in Kathmandu or Pokhara for better communication within Nepal.
